“ Darrell you have always been in my life. When I was young you were my tormenter. When I grew older you were my friend. My biggest memory of you will be how I hate mayonnaise because you force fed it to me. I love you and will miss you.

I don't remember much when we were kids. Mom said you spent lots of time with us since you were four years older than me and so seven years older than Treece. She forgot to mention in the mayonnaise story you were babysitting us and we're told to fix us lunch. You made sandwiches and put Mayo on them. We promptly told you we didn't eat it and you couldn't make us. It was a fight but you caught each of us and stuck a handful of mayo in our mouths. To this day, neither of us will eat mayo.... You were a larger than life hero to me. All guys were compared against because you always seemed so cool to me. Your spirit will greet mine someday. Goodbye Love you.
