I met Krystal in 2019. I guess you could say we were on the struggle bus. The first thing that captured me was those beautiful blue eyes! Weren't they something? But still no match for the beauty in her heart. Such a kind generous and happy person! And let's not forget how fabulously funny she was!! Quite with and we always had a laugh when we talked. She was always eager to talk about her kids and show off their pictures! I also noticed she would be one of the first to welcome someone new and make sure they got everything they needed to be more comfortable. When she got sick and spread the news to the world on here, I will never forget how much more I respected her to share her struggles on here when most everyone else is sharing only the good or making it seem better than it really was. But not Crystal. She suited up and carried us all with her every step of the way. Teaching all of us how precious time really is. Reminding us how small and petty most of our day to day problems are. She was BRAVE from day one and smiling all the way. Although she had departed our world, she taught all of us SOOOO much if we were really paying attention. I will continue to pray for her family and mostly her children!! May they all find peace and some intrinsic meaning during this journey!! Kids, your mom truly left all who knew her better off!! We all loved her!!!
